Mutual Aid: Why are socialists serving your community?

A Better World is Possible

Together, we can make it real.

The Baton Rouge Democratic Socialists of America is building mutual aid networks in your community. It only works if everyone is involved.

Join and learn more: brdsa.org

BRDSA's MAWG

Baton Rouge Democratic Socialists of America (BRDSA) created its Mutual Aid Working Group (MAWG) to support the resilience of the community.

MAWG...

- serves food and other donations to the community.
- hosts Brake Light Clinics, repairing brake lights for free.
- provides emergency kits during weather disasters
- built and fills community fridges
- repairs homes and storage spaces

YOUR HELP IS NEEDED

Come to MAWG's weekly food distros: every Saturday from 12-1pm at 100 N 14th St to learn more

What is mutual aid?

Mutual aid is a type of community service that builds people's capacity to contribute skills, time, and labor towards initiatives that protects and develops others. The goal is to give others the ability to change society and meeting the needs of other working class people.

Mutual Aid is not charity

When an organization with large resources does limited activities without developing those they serve, which ultimately reproduces the present society. Charity reinforces a dependent relationship between servers and served.

Instead, mutual aid seeks to fundamentally change society by empower those it served, creating a mutual relationship between equals.

Socialists do mutual aid in order to move power from wealthy "philanthropists" to the people.

Mutual Aid examples

Mutual aid can look like...

- Cooking food for the community in order to engage in dialogues
- Skill-sharing to educate others how to help themselves
- Community fridges, stocked and used by the community itself
- Collective disaster recovery